

WORLD CUP DRAWS HERE AT LAST

THE DRAWS FOR THE WORLD CUP 2010 TONIGHT!

Tonight at 6pm the draw for the World Cup 2010 will be held in Cape Town. None other than David Beckham himself will be joining a few of South Africa's sporting superstars to draw the teams. We asked a couple of teachers what teams they would like England to play:

Mr. Ambrose, IT/ business teacher said, " I'd like England to hammer France so that Thierry Henry will go home crying!"

However Mr. McKenna, English teacher said, " Any really good team because I want England to lose!"

The thirty-two teams are awaiting to find out who their opponents will be and when they will play. After winning the last World Cup will Italy win again? Well our very own Miss. Francis is behind Italy all the way as half her family is from there.

Now the pots for tonight are:

Pot one:

South Africa, Brazil, Spain, Netherlands, Italy, Germany, Argentina and England.

Pot two:

Japan, South Korea, North Korea, Australia, New-Zealand, United States, Mexico and Honduras.

Pot three:

Ivory Coast, Ghana, Cameroon, Nigeria, Algeria, Paraguay, Chile and Uruguay.

Pot four:

France, Portugal, Slovenia, Switzerland, Greece, Serbia, Denmark and Slovakia.

A few of our teachers have something to say about who they want to win if England don't, for instance:

Miss Hicks, a busy P.E teacher says: " IF England don't win then I want Italy to win because all the men are looking great in their kit. You can't find a better looking team!"

Where as Mr. Camy, vice principal, feels: "If England don't win I want France to win because I used to live there and I speak fluent French." Well only tonight will determine these Results and who will play England.

By Alana, age
11